

In 1997, the Province of Ontario passed the Development Charges Act, 1997 which authorizes Municipalities to pass by-laws for the recovery of cost incurred to provide services to new residential and non-residential development.

In June, 2014, the Town of Orangeville, in conjunction with Watson & Associates Economists Ltd., completed a study of the Town's Development Charges policies in accordance with the Development Charges Act, 1997. This study was prepared to determine new Development Charges for the Town of Orangeville with reference to: a forecast of both residential and non-residential development anticipated in the Town, average capital service levels provided in the Town over the preceding ten year period, a review of current and anticipated capital works both growth and non-growth related, and an examination of long term capital and operating costs for the services to which the Development Charges would relate.
